Other Decoration: 11-line initial I decorated in pen and ink in the left margin. Elongated angular decorative ascenders in the top margin. The first line of the text is in more formal script and approximately twice the height of the rest of the text.

Notes: Fold and holes in the support for attaching a seal, seal missing. The right edge of the page has been trimmed, cutting off part of the text. There is a symbol, perhaps a personal or notarial sign, in the left margin. It is faded and partially damaged by the binding process, but it appears to include two crosses, one thick, with bent arms, next to the final note, and one thin, somewhat like a processional cross, next to the last two lines of the main text. There appears to be a letter underneath the thick cross but it is too damaged to read with confidence. One Union Theological Seminary library stamp on face and two on dorse. One modern pencil note about content on face, one older note about content on dorse. Latin
